

Frequently Asked Question

The Birbal Sahni Institute of Palaeosciences (BSIP) in Lucknow is an autonomous research institute under the Department of Science and Technology (DST). Here are the frequently asked questions regarding the institute and its programs:

1. What is BSIP and where is it located?

BSIP stands for the Birbal Sahni Institute of Palaeosciences. It is an autonomous research organization funded by the Government of India. The institute is located at 53 University Road, Lucknow, Uttar Pradesh.

2. What are the primary research areas of BSIP?

Research at BSIP covers a broad spectrum of Earth and life sciences. Key areas include:

- Understanding the origin and evolution of early life.
- Reconstructing past climate changes and environmental history over geological time.
- Exploring and analyzing fossil fuels (coal, oil, etc.).
- Documenting ancient vegetation dynamics.

3. Does BSIP offer Ph.D. programs?

Yes, BSIP actively admits candidates into its Ph.D. program in collaboration with various universities. The application process requires a CV, academic transcripts, and a 250-word write-up on your field of interest. Applications are typically processed on a quarterly basis, and you can submit them to the institute.

4. Can students apply for short-term training or dissertation programs?

Yes, BSIP offers a dedicated Masters Dissertation Programme as well as short-term training opportunities. Deadlines and openings for these are published on the BSIP Notice and Updates page.

5. What laboratory and library facilities are available?

BSIP is equipped with sophisticated analytical instrument facilities and a robust computer network. The institute's Knowledge Resource Centre (library) is part of the NKRC consortium, providing researchers access to e-journals (Elsevier, Springer, Wiley), databases (Scopus, Web of Science), and plagiarism-checking tools like Grammarly and iThenticate.

6. How can I contact the institute?

You can reach out using the following contact information:

- Address: Birbal Sahni Institute of Palaeosciences, 53 University Road, Lucknow - 226007, Uttar Pradesh, India
- Email: director@bsip.res.in, registrar@bsip.res.in

- Phone: +91-522-2742903, 2742902